Winter becomes a season of growth

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

In what is usually one of the slowest seasons of the year, Haliburton has seen a hive of activity going on in every corner of the village. There are signs of growth and renewal everywhere, changing the look of the village in just one short year. In five different locations, construction crews are hard at work at various stages of their endeavour, employing many people in what has previously been a time of higher unemployment and promising even busier times ahead.

The business project nearest completion is the expansion to Black's Home Hardware, on the corner of Maple and Highland Street. Though the inside work has not been totally finished and workers are waiting for warmer weather to do the outside brick work, shoppers are already able to browse through the new wing in search of their hardware needs.

"I just felt the community is on the verge of an expansion over the next 10 years and I wanted to be ready for it," says owner Ken Langdon of his reason to expand. The old store had a retail space of approximately 7,000 square feet and the expansion adds a further 4,300 square feet on two floors, one of which he hopes to rent out.

The store will now be better stocked to serve all sorts of hardware needs from plumbing, electrical and automotive supplies to other products already available such as furniture and kitchen equipment. The new section will be devoted to hardware, leaving more room in the main store for an expanded line of products.

"Home Hardware is known for the fact that it's price competitive so this will bring more products to people at good Home Hardware prices and they won't have to go out of town," Langdon says. Keeping business in Haliburton is important to everyone, and Langdon believes that by offering the people more selection, people's need to leave the village to do their shopping will decrease. New carpeting is being laid throughout the store and a new ceiling and lights are also being installed. Right now customers may find that what they're looking for is still in the packing box, but Langdon hopes everything will be cleared up by this week.

Ward wins nomination

Local resort owner is new PC candidate

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

John Eakins should "look over his shoulder," says the new Progressive Conservative candidate, because Art Ward is "looking forward to the next fight."

In a crowded gym at Lindsay's I.E. Weldon Secondary School, the Haliburton resort owner told party faithfuls he wants to take his place with the team in Toronto, confident that just as he could win the riding nomination, he can beat the Liberal Minister of Tourism in the election expected this fall.

Ward secured his winning candidacy in the second ballot, beating Oakwood's Valmay Barkey by a vote of 265 to 189.

Most of Ward's supporters in the second ballot were with him for the first ballot and he captured less than half of the votes which previously had gone to the third candidate, Anne Wilson. The first vote was Ward, 215, Barkey 137, and Wilson 117, with 62 of Wilson's supporters going to Barkey and 50 changing sides to Ward. Referred to as "the woman's vote", some believed Wilson and Barkey got votes not only because of their speeches, but because they were women.

Certainly, the top two finishers arrived in the gymnasium with the most pomp and ceremony, their posters and slogans already battling for recognition on the walls surrounding the delegates. "United with Wilson", "Valmay Barkey—Our key to the future" and "Let's go ForWard" were seen everywhere before and during the convention, when each camp tried to gather support and votes.

Barkey was the first speaker, and her boisterous supporters brought her in on an antique carriage, yelling their favourite candidate's name as they entered the gym and continuing to voice their support during her speech.

"Change is not only possible, but imminent and when the PCs step out the door, we're going to move," she said.

The Liberals' legislation and governing methods have "chopped away at inherent societal values and disregarded people's wishes", she said, stressing that if she won the nomination she would protect the democratic process through a grassroots approach, enabling legislation to respond to the people.

With a "free, vibrant market system, where the hard worker can get ahead," Barkey believed the province could thrive and prosper, and she was ready "to lead the assault."

Barkey believed her involvement with Victoria County Community

Winning on a second ballot vote of 265 to 189, Art Ward now plans to win against Liberal incumbent John Eakins in an election.

Raising his arm as a show of victory, Victoria-Haliburton's new Progressive Conservative candidate wears look of happiness after learning he beat our Valmay Barkey and Anne Wilson at Saturday's nomination convention. Art Ward says he now looks forward to an election expected sometime this year.

Health unit plans to move to Good Medical building

The Haliburton office of the Haliburton Kawartha Pine Ridge District Health Unit will move to the Good Medical building by June 1, vacating the former Haliburton hospital building across from the Dysart arena which has housed the health unit offices for a number of years.

Monmouth reeve Keith Tallman, county council representative to the Health Unit, said the move is necessary because new programs are coming on stream and the existing quarters are no longer adequate.

Dr. Harry Good will move his practice to his home, and the other doctors who shared his ground floor clinic have left the community. Accountants Dawson Gray Dart, who have occupied the second floor, will move to an as yet undisclosed location. Dr. John Postlethwaite and the MDS Laboratories will retain their offices in the basement.

Tallman said phasing in of a new homemaker program is the main reason Health Unit is moving to the Good building, although existing offices had previously become over-

Training centre welcomes dignitaries at opening

by STEPHEN PATRICK

The Haliburton Highlands Hospitality Training Centre celebrated two major events this past week. At an Open House on Tuesday, March 3rd, federal and provincial politicians helped local residents and business people celebrate the opening of the Centre's new training facility at the former Dellhaven on Highway 121. The training centre is operating the facility as a commercial Bed and Breakfast.

At the opening, Bill Scott, federal MP for Victoria Haliburton, and the Hon. John Eakins, the provincial MPP and Minister of Tourism, both commented on the clear need for a facility of this kind in an area of high unemployment and a rapidly growing tourism industry. Funding for the Training Centre is provided by grants from Canada Employment and Immigration.

Approximately 150 people attended the Open House. Wine and hors d'oeuvres were prepared and served by the Centre's trainees, under the supervision of Instructors Sheila Whiting and Michael O'Hara.

On Thursday, March 5, 11 trainees from the Centre's 8th Session celebrated their graduation after a 22 week training course. Graduates were: Debbie Fountain; Penny Gough; Leverage Wooley; William Browne; Glenn Hie; Carol Lewis; Jack Simms; Barb Carr; Dan Laprise; Timothy Elstone, and Keith Kennedy. The Graduation dinner was held at the Hart Lodge, Minden. The trainees paid for their dinner with tips received from serving at various functions in the community. Warm thanks were expressed to Hart Lodge Chef Al Smith, and to Owners John Mateer and Bob White who provided the trainees with a spectacular cake decorated with the HTC logo and the trainees names.

Recent events also included the preparation and serving of dinner to 80 Stanhope Volunteer Firefighters, together with their wives and guests, on Saturday, February 28th. The trainees received a standing ovation from the crowd at the end of the evening.

On Saturday, March 21, Session 9 trainees will be preparing and serving a turkey dinner to 250 people at a Benefit for the Minden Hospital, at the Minden Community Centre.

POLICE NEWS

Stolen Snow Vehicle - Wilberforce

A 1977 Ski Doo Olympic yellow was stolen from the Texaco in Wilberforce during the evening on March 5. The machine was removed from the trailer it was sitting on and driven away.

Woman Charged

Michelle Leveque, age 19, of Peterborough has been charged with assault with a weapon after police were called to a residence on North Kashagawigamog Road late March 8. There were no injuries received during the occurrence. Leveque will appear in Provincial Court, Minden, on May 6.

First Offence Conviction

Rita Barry, age 28, of Stanhope Township was convicted of driving with over 80 mgs. of alcohol, at County Court, Lindsay on February 20. Barry was sentenced to 60 days in jail and probation of five months. The conviction results from a fatal motor vehicle accident which occurred on November 2, 1985 at Highway 118 north of Haliburton.

Barbara Dawson, chairman of the Haliburton Hospital Expansion Fund, accepted a cheque for $500 from Gladys Reid last Thursday on behalf of the Haliburton senior citizens club. Fund raising efforts continue to go well, and work on the addition will start later this year.

Homemaking services to expand

The new program will make homemaker service available to many more people than previous programs, because medical referrals no longer will be required. Instead, program coordinators will assess needs on request and assign homemakers to assist elderly people whenever the service is warranted. Tallman said the program will create a number of new jobs in the community at the same time that it helps people stay in their homes and out of institutions as long as possible.

"It's going to employ a lot of people, no question about it," the Monmouth reeve said.

Renovations to the ground floor of the Good building will begin immediately, Tallman said. A large conference room will be created, and other interior changes also will be made. It is hoped that the Health Unit will be fully installed in its new quarters by June 1.

Dysart council has not yet decided what it will do with the old hospital building once the Health Unit vacates it. Among the possibilities is relocation of the county library office from its present quarters at the Dysart library.

CHACE Place also has asked for space in the building, but council did not appear to favour that option, since CHACE already has begun discussions with private landowners who may be willing to provide rental space for the agency.

Land for draw is provided

Dysart council has agreed to provide a municipally owned lakefront lot to the Haliburton Lions Club, who will sell tickets on it and donate the proceeds to the Haliburton Hospital Expansion Fund.

On Monday, council agreed it would turn over the lot on the north shore of Kennis Lake to the club, and be paid for it according to the number of tickets the club is able to sell.

The club hopes to sell 2,500

tickets at $25 each, for a potential total of $62,500. Councillors decided on a base price of $10,000 for the lot if half the tickets are sold. If three quarters of the tickets are sold, the Lions Club will pay the municipality $12,000 for the lot, and if all of the tickets are sold, the club's cost for the lot would be $15,000.

Council has previously offered the lot—Block A, Plan 460—for sale, but has been unable to conclude any deal with potential purchasers.

Challenges ahead for Conservatives

Care would benefit a riding which has the largest percentage of senior citizens in the province. Since she and her husband run a feed and grain business, Barkey also believed she could represent the many farmers in the riding.

"No longer can we let our farmers work for 50 cents an hour and close our eyes" to the many problems facing those in the agricultural industry, she said. As well, there is tremendous learning from having a family, she added.

It is persistence and determination which bring success in life, she said, whether on an individual basis or with the PC party, and she has both.

"As you go to mark your ballots...be swayed, not by your heart, but by your head—Barkey will indeed be the key to our future."

The strains of Earl Cooper's bagpipes heralded the entrance of Art and Joan Ward and their entourage, who arrived with plenty of cheering, balloons and yellow ribbons.

"Today is just the beginning," said Ward. "Your being here today show the Progressive Conservatives are alive and well and ready."

The success of the party in the past has been to avoid simple labels, he said, and what is important are the challenges facing the party and the province.

Some of the key issues are having the right to productive and meaningful employment, clean and healthy environment, addressing new fiscal realities, advances in care for the elderly, and keeping our battered health care professionals and the system up to date.

"I'm tired of promises undelivered," he said, rousing his audience. Centring his attention on tourism, and his next opponent, John Eakins (who is the minister in charge of one of the province's main industries), Ward attacked two of the programs brought in under Eakins.

"Destinations East had great press and big hopes but the program has stuttered and stammered for five months and it hasn't worked," he says. And despite delegates at 18 round table discussions telling him the new slogan of Ontario...Incredible! will not work, Eakins went ahead with it anyway. Besides not liking the new program, Ward also did not like the fact that it cost $500,000 to build a fake lake and a studio general store, when the province boasts many of the real thing.

"Your ministry is chuck full of indecision," Ward accused Eakins. "Roll down the windows of your limousine, John. Let the fresh air of Victoria and Haliburton into your office."

Ward ended by saying Eakins' government has offered press releases instead of achievements and Eakins himself is running away from the Northern Schools issue in Victoria County.

When Anne Wilson took to the stage by herself without any great cheers and hallelaloo, she said "the only demonstration I will give you today is how we will defeat John Eakins."

The Conservatives have shaped Ontario minds and have built a framework of laws to ensure the rights of people in every walk of life, from union workers to business owners, and have provided the services these people need throughout their lives, Wilson said.

Much was done by "old man Ontario", Leslie Frost, a Lindsay lawyer who went on to be the Conservative premier of the province, Wilson said. He advanced social assistance programs and was the driving force behind the St. Lawrence Seaway and the Trans

Canada Highway.

Victoria and Haliburton Counties have "played a glorious role in history," she said, and she wants to see it happen again. From December, when she first announced her nomination, she has driven 6,500 kilometres talking to people in their barns, homes and places of business.

"I knew I couldn't stand here today if I didn't demonstrate to you my willingness and dedication," she said. This practice of talking with people would continue if she was chosen—"I'm listening and you will be heard."

Some of the issues she raised were day care, more non-polluting industries, shifts in logging, the Three Buoys houseboat dispute (people who live on the shores of lakes are concerned about rowdiness on the part of people who rent the boats), the abandoned railway line and concerns of parents involved with Save our Schools in the northern part of Victoria County.

"I'm ready to provide the leadership of a team which will reach into every corner of this riding," she said. Referring to a successful campaign she ran for another PC delegate in a riding which traditionally voted New Democratic, Wilson said "I've made it happen before and I can do it again. Conservatives get things done and the time had come for me to stand for what I believed in."

After delegates went to cast their votes in the first ballot, Don McCumber introduced guest speaker Tom Long, the president of the provincial PCs.

"John Eakins is going to answer for all his crazy friends," said Long before telling the crowd "I have never seen such a large and enthusiastic crowd of Tories" in the

Haliburton experiences much growth, expansion

be serving customers by April 1 and he and his staff have already started moving things over to the new building.

When the smoke from last August's fire finally cleared, Stedman's, the Toy Centre, Family Fashions, Frost Insurance, and Highlands Health Foods were totally destroyed but the building which held Halco Audio Visual was still standing. They were open for business the next day, but soon were told they'd have to leave the premises because the building was unsafe. For the past several months, Duncombe's operations have been spread about the village and his staff has had to cram all the videos and electronic equipment into two small spaces in the Village Barn. If the old store was not large enough, then these cramped quarters were less than suitable.

"I want to have the best Radio Shack dealer store north of Toronto," is Duncombe's goal, and with two and a half times more space, he now believes this is possible.

The main retail store is 2,800 square feet and will be filled with an expanded line of videos, tapes, records, electronic equipment and supplies, televisions, radios, disc players, computers and practically everything offered through Radio Shack. (Duncombe says they'll have all the products in stock which are $3 or less but cannot guarantee he will have all of the costlier equipment, such as large computers, on hand.)

As far as his new selection of tapes and records, Duncombe says the new Halco will have the largest selection north of Peterborough and that includes Bancroft and Huntsville.

"The market is definitely here for it but we never had the space for it," he says, adding that the tapes and video will now be better displayed and people won't be bumping into each other as they make their decisions.

Behind the display will be a two-way mirror, with Duncombe's office on the other side. While there is no problem in Haliburton of people stealing the electronics equipment, shoplifting is all too common with tapes and this way, Duncombe can watch the section as he sits in his office. "It will keep dishonest people on their toes," he says.

Since Duncombe's office and the computer department used to be in the old vault in the other building, (it had originally been a bank), the addition of new space is most welcome and will mean Halco offices will not be spread from building to building as they are now.

Downstairs, which people can also reach through a door from the back parking lot beside Bruce's Barber Shop, will be the television repair shop and storage area. The 2,400 square feet can be expanded as the business grows, and will mean less clutter in other parts of the building.

Across the hall will be John Robinson's new outlet store called The Finishing Touch. Robinson, the owner of Beachli Construction 1984, will carry a line of products which home owners need, as the store's name suggests, for those finishing touches. This complements his construction company and Robinson will also have a workshop where the old laundromat used to be. Above The Finishing Touch is Dr. Abrahamse's office. Access to the Family Medical Centre, Haliburton Hairdressing and Bruce's will be separate from the new building. When asked what he feels about the future of his new venture, Duncombe replies, "First of all, I'm very optimistic for the whole state of business in Haliburton. Haliburton seems to have a real spirit of entrepreneurship."

"I think we'll have summer like we've never had before."

The move to the new location was made easier by the fact Duncombe and his father, Rex Boice, already owned the property and had been considering building on it when the lease on the old store ran out next April.

"The fire more or less crystalized something that had been kicking around in my mind and my dad's," Duncombe says. When they realized they were going to have to leave their old premises and didn't know when they could be back, "I thought at that time we might as well go for it."

With the new building, Duncombe believes he will help solve an old problem—parking. The parking lot between Halco and Home Hardware is jointly owned and when the weather clears up, the area will be paved and painted with lines for diagonal parking. The entrance off Maple Street will be just one way, and people will exit from the wider lane beside Bruce's.

Stedman's to open May 24

Stedman's owner Vince Connaughan hopes his new complex will open for business on May 24 weekend, just in time for the official start to a new season. Even though his reason to rebuild came out of a bad situation, Connaughan believes that with his new shopping complex, something good can come out of it.

Besides being a new home for Stedman's, the new building will also house 12 additional stores under the same roof, some thing which Connaughan believes is very beneficial for shoppers.

"People can come in and do the majority of their shopping," he says. Parking will also be an advantage since the municipality will be developing more parking space along York Street. Before, people would park in the IGA parking lot and walk across the street, but with the addition of side doors and walk ways, people will now be able to park on York Street and enter the store from there.

Another welcome change will be a loading area at the back of the store, avoiding the traffic chaos which was caused before by big trucks parking on the main street as their cargo was unloaded.

Connaughan says he has not put any "sidewalk supervisors" in the boards blocking the sight of the construction from passersby on Highland Street because he wants to wait until construction is at least two thirds finished and the sight of the new store will be a greater surprise.

Right now, the walls are all up and the main building (steel pre-fab) will begin to go up on the 15th of March. The workers were putting in heat last week to get the frost out of the ground so they can pour the concrete floor soon. Then the interior walls will go up and electricians will keep busy doing the wiring. Connaughan expects the whole structure will be up in the next three weeks and people will begin to see the store near its completion.

While he is very pleased about the pace of construction, Connaughan said he has had to learn a lot about construction and how fast it can be completed.

"At times it may be discouraging, but considering I'm not in construction and it's winter, it's going okay," he says. "I'm pleased with the progress."

It has not yet been decided which 12 stores will fill the new shopping complex, but Connaughan says he has received many inquiries and offers.

Seniors get new building

All of these shoppers have to have a place to live, and that's where the new senior citizens apartment building comes into the picture. With its central location on Head Lake and closeness to the downtown shopping, the people who will live in the 50 accommodations will also benefit from the expansion going on.

It is hoped those new residents will be able to move in by the first of July, says Haliburton Community Housing Corporation president Cliff Dawson. Workers are in the final stages of framing and the roof has been put on all but a middle section.

Even though the construction was one month late in starting, everything has been running according to plans since then. Part of the reason it has taken so long is the two thick fire walls which had to be installed on all three floors, though it has yet to be finished on the middle section.

The apartment building has been designed with a jag in the middle to take away from a long, straight look and indeed, if you look at the building from Highway 121 right now, it does look as if it is two separate buildings.

The centre "joint" has a large lounge built with picture windows promising many sun-filled days ahead for the residents up above the main entrance and reception area. At first, they were a bit concerned about having the three storeys, but now Dawson believes the apartments on the top floors will be the nicest because of the view.

"It's a beautiful location," says Dawson, not only because it is on the lake but also because it's near to shopping, the Drop In Centre, and two churches—Haliburton United Church and St. Anthony's.

Because soil samples showed planners that piles would have to be driven into the ground, it was decided to cover the frame with vinyl, not brick. The concrete piles were quite an expensive addition to the cost of the building, but they would not be able to support the weight of a brick building. The weather has been co operating with the work crews

A solution

Dysart council thinks it may have come up with means of dealing with the threat of property damage posed by a beaver dam at the eastern headwater of a creek that flows through Victoria Street Public School's playground and several other residential and commercial properties before discharging into Head Lake. Council hopes to build a road across the watercourse just below the existing beaver dam as a means of controlling any flooding that would result if the beaver dam were breached by runoff or heavy rains. The road would be built on a base of large boulders and smaller stones to reduce the chances of it washing away in a flood. A culvert through the roadbed would control water flow and allow it to be discharged without flooding downstream properties.

The plan appears to be a good one, and it demonstrates that council is willing to look for solutions to problems that concern the public. Although the possibility has always been remote, parents of Victoria Street School children have expressed the fear that a flash flood from a break in the beaver dam might sweep youngsters away. To minimize that already minimal risk, students are kept away from the lower school yard after heavy rains or when spring runoff conditions prevail. Even with the new road in place, that will still be a sensible precaution.

A road over the creek is a much more realistic solution to the problem than a control dam would be, not only because of costs, but because the road will not require environmental assessment and myriad approvals from various government agencies. If it can be built this summer, the problem of flooding along the creek bed will almost certainly have been solved, and at a reasonable cost. That's an approach which benefits everyone.

New quarters

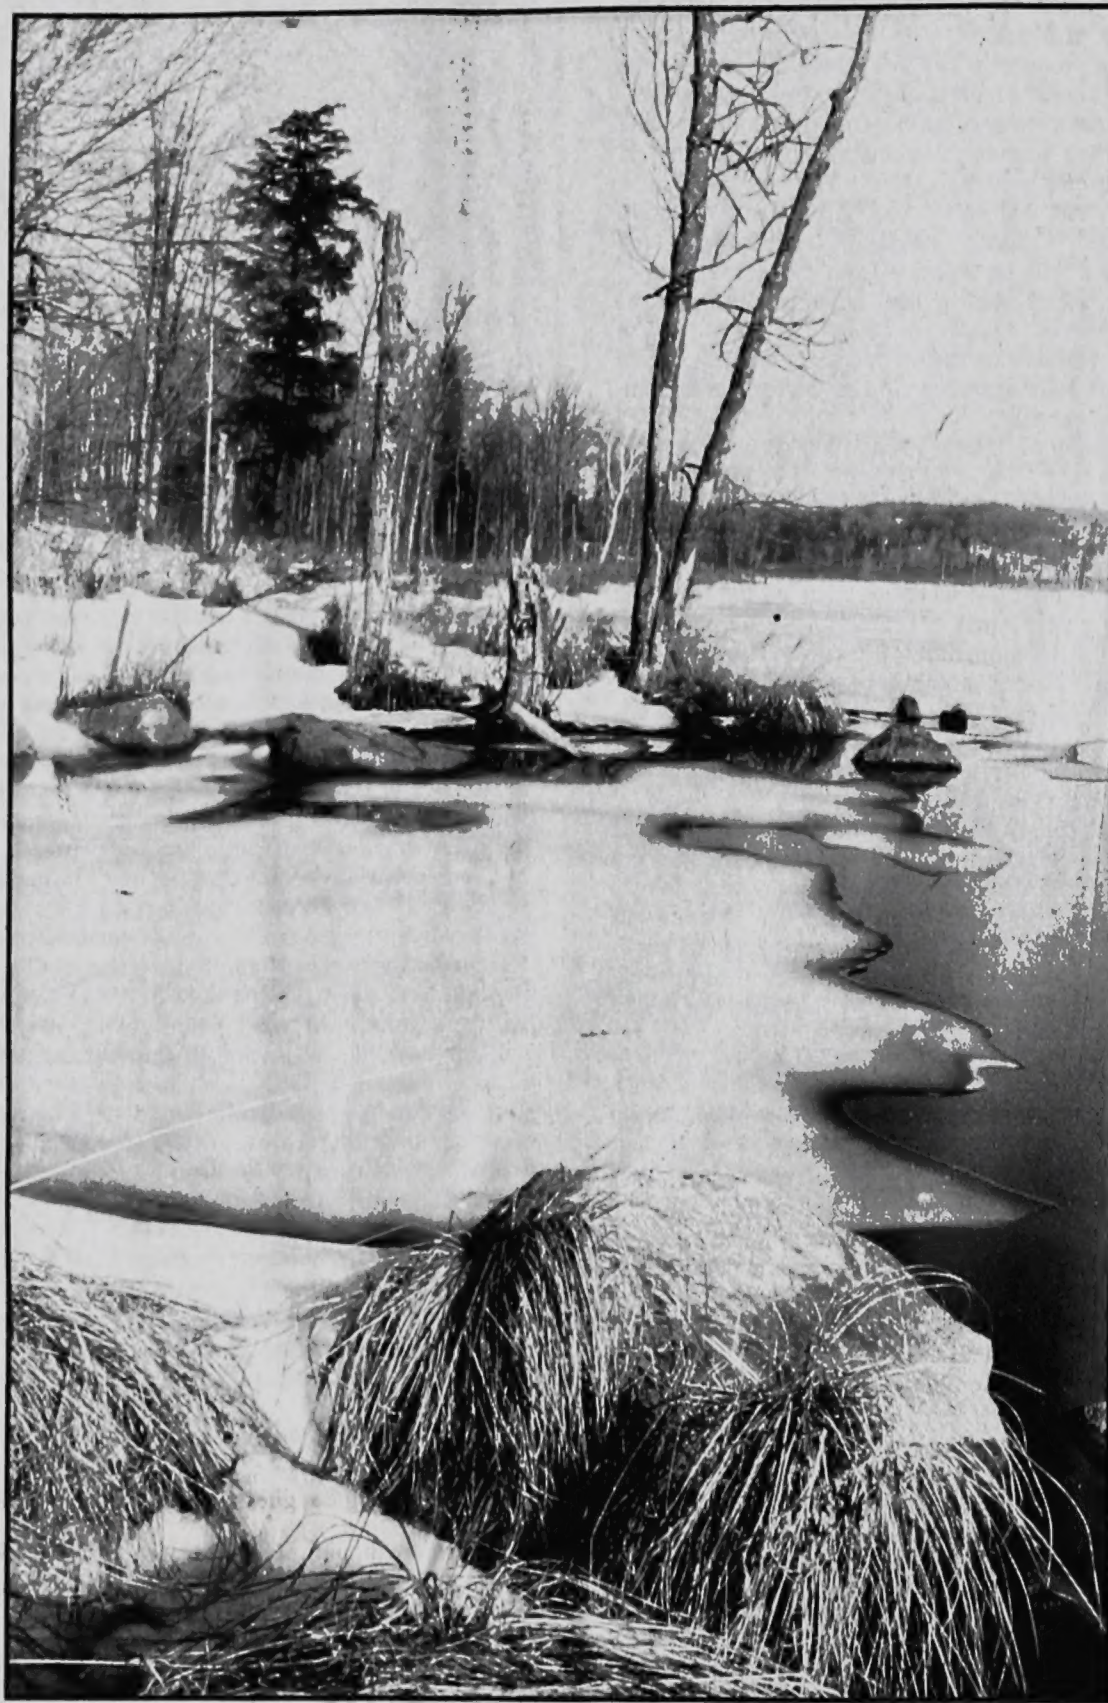

The local office of the health unit is about to expand into new quarters. The Unit, which has occupied offices in the former hospital building across from the Dysart arena, is moving to the Good building by June 1. The move will cause temporary disruptions not only for the Unit itself but for the former tenants of the Good building, but in the end the community seems likely to benefit particularly if new uses for the old hospital can be found.

In its new quarters, the health unit will have space to operate a homecare program that promises to help more elderly people stay in their homes longer. While this program no doubt will be costly, it will almost certainly be less expensive than providing care in hospitals and institutions, and that means tax dollars will be saved. As well, expansion of the health unit will create new jobs in the community, and that means a strengthened local economy.

Another potential benefit to the community is the fact that more space will be made available for services which already occupy cramped quarters. Dysart council, which owns the hospital building, has suggested it might be a good location for the county library office, which would in turn make more space available to the Dysart library.

It is also possible that the availability of space in the old hospital building will set the stage for some serious thought about the location of other county services. County council has agreed to take over the administration of welfare services, but in doing so, it ignored the recommendations of a study which said the service should be operated from a central location. It makes very little sense to service the entire county from the south western end of it, not only because of the substantial cost of the additional miles that administrators will have to travel, but because of the hours that will be wasted as a result. Perhaps county officials can be persuaded to rethink their decision about where the central welfare office is located, in the interest of saving tax dollars and ensuring that the best possible job is done.

As well, the availability of space in the old hospital building might result in better police protection for the community, if a satellite detachment office could be located there. That is a possibility worth considering.

Canada Post tells its version

from Echo readers

To the Editor:

I would like to reply to your recent editorial about changes in rural postal service (Unthinkable, February 4, 1987).

I can assure you that Canada Post is committed to providing high quality, cost-efficient postal service to all Canadians. The Business Plan, released by the Corporation on November 5, 1986, outlines the measures it plans to take to achieve that goal.

I wish to take this opportunity to explain the Corporation's plans in greater detail. At the outset, you may be aware that, as was announced by the previous Minister responsible for Canada Post, the Honourable Michel Cote, the Corporation has no plans to close any rural post offices for the time being.

It is important to note that in the vast majority of smaller towns and villages, Canada Post will simply be changing the method or location of service within the community, with the result of improved access to its products and services for customers. The changes will be made with a view to achieving the goals of maintaining community identity, and maintaining retail and delivery services on site. On the rare occasion when Canada Post does amalgamate one post office with another, customers will generally continue to receive delivery in their community through group mail boxes and Super mail boxes, and the Corporation will strive to establish a retail presence in the town.

Mr. Lander has made a commitment that Canada Post will provide a minimum of 90 days' notice of any proposed service adjustments to postal customers and their Members of Parliament. This period will be used for consultation with local residents to determine the best type of service they would prefer.

Over the next 10 years or more, Canada Post will be placing the majority of its retail services into the hands of the private sector. This change will be made with consistency and with sensitivity during the 10-year transition period. The change will benefit the Corporation, because it will greatly reduce the cost of maintaining its retail network, and, at the same time, will benefit customers all across the country by increasing the hours and accessibility to postal service and products.

Although Canada Post has given consideration to reducing the length and expense of some of its rural routes by serving customers through Super mail boxes installed at the nearest main intersection, concerns raised following the announcement of this proposal have convinced the Corporation to retain lot line delivery for all rural customers now receiving it.

I trust this explains Canada Post's position with respect to rural mail service.

Yours Sincerely,
Edouard Hall, Director
Canada Post Corporation.

Criminals must pay

To the Editor:

With reference to the letter in the February 25 edition of the Echo, from Mr. James M. MacLachie, Executive Director of the John Howard Society of Canada, I must agree with him that capital punishment has not proven to be a deterrent to murder. On the other hand a few years in prison has not proven to be a deterrent to robbery or any other crimes, but we still put people in prison. If all that society is interested in, when someone is sentenced to prison, or to be executed, is the deterrent value of the sentence, we might just as well open all the prison gates and save the tax payers some money.

Capital punishment and imprisonment are both forms of punishment for crimes against the State and against individuals. In this context the punishment should fit the crime.

I do not suggest that all murders warrant the death penalty, however, any person who commits a premeditated murder or who murders someone during the commission of another crime, has forfeited his or her right to compassionate treatment by society. They should be excised from society like a malignant tumor is cut from the body.

Our whole justice system is losing its fight against crime because of bleeding hearts who do not consider the anguish of the victims of crime, but only see the rights of the poor criminal being violated. How about the rights of the families and friends of a murder victim? Their lives will never be the same because of the actions of someone who didn't have any feeling for anyone's rights but their own. These families are expected to turn the other cheek while the one who took their loved ones life will only spend a few years in prison, at the taxpayers expense, being better treated and eating better food than many of Canada's poor people.

While I commend Mr. MacLachie and the John Howard Society for the rehabilitation programs for those who are released from prison after serving their punishment, I do not agree

I can't understand why some people who are looking for donations have to run first to the people in business hoping that they will bring out the cash to help their certain organization or what have you. If they need money this bad why don't they make a canvass and go door to door for a change and hit some of these people living on the back streets who have more money now than most of the business people will have in a lifetime. Most of the business people in the community are struggling to make ends meet and it has come to the time when they are going to have to decide to whom and when donations are to be given. It's also just about time that the Cottage Associations started getting their donations and prizes from another source other than the business people. Each year they come with their hands out for donations. If they want to have a field day or regatta they should raise their own money or get out of it. Some people are of the opinion that just because a person is in business that they have lots of money to throw around. This is not the case and in many instances these same business people have had to cut back in certain areas. It's a fact that some people who spend very little money with the local merchants are the first to be out there with their hand out looking for a donation for this or that. Most of the local business people who I have been talking with are fed up with this situation and in their opinion enough is enough.

In my column last week I mentioned the new addition to the Lady of Fatima Roman Catholic Church in Minden. I happened to mention that the new addition would be used as a hall for such things as bingos and bazaars. I stand to be corrected. I have been informed that the new addition will serve as a dual purpose facility with an increase in seating capacity to look after the over flow crowds during the summer months. It will also serve as a Parish Hall. I would like to make it clear that Bingo will not be played in the new facility. I apologize for any inconvenience this may have caused.

One day last week we received a short note from a reader in Cobocok in which he pointed out the following: "I am sure there is a reason, and I would like to know what it is, that Kent Cleaners are listed under 'Churches' every week in the paper. Maybe sometime, if you have room, you could explain this to the readers." Well here we go with the answer. Each week up to just recently the Kent Cleaners ad was moved around from one spot to the other and from one page to the other. When a one column church ad was no longer going to run on a weekly basis it left a space to be filled. Not having a church ad for that particular space we put in Kent Cleaners and it just filled the bill. After receiving this note we realized that Kent Cleaners should come out from under the church heading and we have replaced it with a filler ad for the time being.

POINTS OF VIEW

Rocking the horse proves costly

The View From Here

Harvey Clarke

A few weeks ago, I wrote about the problems of car insurance and the way the companies cook things so that you can get stuck with claims — and fat premiums — regardless of the circumstances.

It seems everyone has a horror story to tell in this area, and I guess my writing about the subject brought a lot of them to mind. But there are apparently some pretty sad stories about insurance that have nothing to do with cars.

I'd better say it again: some of my best friends are insurance agents. However, it would be difficult to say that my admiration for them extends to the giant companies they represent, whether it is auto insurance or otherwise... This time I'm talking about liability insurance — the stuff that did in the Stanhope Airshow, for one local example. The classic Canadian case is the teenager who rammed another playing 'chicken' on motorbikes, while trespassing on public property in Brampton. A paraplegic, he's suing for something like $3.6 million, to take care of him — and a battery of lawyers, no doubt — for the rest of their lives...

Others claim that the problem lies with Lloyds of London and other overseas insurers, who bulk Canada in with the U.S., and are smarting from all those cases from California where suing is a way of life, particularly medical malpractice and the like.

Whatever the reasons behind it, I've come across a couple of cases that are really quite sad, and odd enough they both have to do with horses, though of radically different kinds.

One of the biggest kicks I think my wife and I ever had when travelling was on an impulse. Six or seven years ago while touring northern California, we had picked a motel from a guide just because it was on Halfmoon Bay, south of San Francisco, and that sounded fascinating.

It was. A beautiful place, with a Spanish decor, it was surrounded by a golf course, but still in sight of the sea. When we went down to the ocean in the morning, we saw people horseback riding along the beach in the surf — just like in the commercials.

We discovered that there was a riding stable just down the road, so before we checked out and took off again, we spent a couple of leisurely hours riding together along the surfline of the Pacific.

As I recall, it was the first time my wife had got me back on a horse since our honeymoon, but this was a more cooperative beast, and all in all it was a most pleasant experience. While I'm not a big fan, because I'm not very good at it, I can certainly see why it is such a big kick to so many people.

And of course, it's great in an area like the Highlands. But a rental stable like the one we visited is the only way 99 of the people are ever going to get to go horseback riding. And rumor has it, there may not be too many chances in the future.

From what I hear, the costs of insurance against liability for riding stables has gone through the roof. For whatever reason, the insurance companies are cranking things up to the point where stable owners know that they could never successfully charge enough to recover what they have to pay for insurance.

Now if you think that's terrible, as I do, then get a load of this: I have friends who are having trouble getting insurance for their wooden rocking horses!

Cindy and Dwight left city-type careers, to relocate on several treed acres over near Milton by the Escarpment. They have been raising their three daughters, and developing a successful business through a woodworking business that started in their double garage.

They make a number of items, but it all started with a very attractive rocking horse design that Dwight first created for his own children. Everybody who saw one wanted one, when Cindy ran a sample by some of the better toy emporiums in and around Metro Toronto, they were off and running.

They learned to mass-produce the parts, yet put together very individually crafted horses that were signed and numbered. They were a great favorite with grandparents who wanted something very special for that first grandchild.

They were able to expand from the double garage to a building on the property fitted out with a paint room with a proper fan, and all the special equipment to collect sawdust and generally make it a safer place to work.

Fortunately, they chose to add some other items to their line. Now, the hall mirrors with shelves, pine bedside tables and other items that they added to their line may become the main part of their business.

They can get insurance for their production area, with its paint fumes and sawdust, but not if they're producing rocking horses. It seems that the insurance companies are shying away from the chance of any liability claims from customers who would buy a rocking horse, and then claim a child was hurt falling off!

All in all, for adults or children, who want to ride 'for real' or in their imaginations, it's a sad commentary on the times.

Hope 'springs' eternal in March

Northern Lights

Virginia Muenzel

Beaut weekend eh? And if you don't have spring fever after that you're not normal.

Not that spring fever is a normal condition. Just in case you haven't noticed, everyone is walking around kind of half stupid, waiting for something to happen. Out of sorts and not really too ambitious. Soaking up the warm rays and dozing off frequently. Scanning the sky for a robin and trying to guess when the snow will vanish.

Skiers are hoping it will survive through the spring break, while employees at the hills and lodges pray for a heavy rain.

The sap is running and that must wait, along with a dozen other projects, until the snow is officially declared un-ski-able. So on Sunday, we walked along the road counting gullies running under the dirty snowbanks, trying to explain to our grandson where the snow all goes when it melts.

Then we put on our snowshoes and cut across the field to the woodchuck's hole. He's been sticking out his head each morning to sniff the warm, fresh air, and then cautiously checks out the neighbourhood for signs of greenery. Finding none, he sprints back to his front door to await a better menu.

But the weatherman predicted more cold on the way. Besides, have you every seen a St. Patrick's Day parade that wasn't marched down gusty streets, with majorette's knees knocking, slush sloshing and steamy breath rising from paraders and viewers like an old train engine puffing down the tracks?

March can be so cruel. It teases us into thinking winter is over. And as soon as we swallow the bait, it blasts us with a windy frigid reality. Sending us shivering back into our long johns and woolen socks for another week.

But at least we know there is hope. Hope "Springs" eternal. And soon there will be kites, and puddles and crocus and daffodils and flies and mud and the wonderful Spring Housecleaning.

Standing tall for Queen's anthem

Sunny Side Up

Martha Perkins

Sometimes, when things become a habit, you tend to lose sight of why you do them. You become so accustomed to doing something, the actions or words just follow automatically, without thinking.

The other day, I found myself standing at attention to sing the words of "God Save Our Queen." A crowd of Canadians, with their own constitution, heritage and culture, became loyal British subjects in a matter of seconds when the first chords were sung. Not only that, but people also seemed to stand proudly when they wished Queen Elizabeth to long reign over us. It might have been a habit, but it was obviously a habit people enjoyed.

I admit I like the Queen for all her funny suits and hats, and I think the Queen Mother must be one of the nicest women, even though I base my opinion solely on the pictures I have seen of her. The Charles and Diana, Andrew and Sarah, culds do not appeal to me as much because I think they are too young, and not yet Kingly or Queenly enough. Yet when the time comes, I'll stand up and sing my allegiance to the crown no matter who is wearing it.

As you can tell by my stories, I enjoy learning more about Haliburton's past and the people who shaped it. For too long we have disregarded our history and I think this is a great waste of fascinating tales and adventures. Our past thrives within us, and there is no denying it is a vital part of our lives.

With that point made, I'd like to get back to the Queen and all she represents. Since most people arrived in Canada from someplace else, we can't simply search Canada's past to find insight into who we are or where we came from. People need a sense of continuity in their lives, not only when they look in the past but also when they look towards the future.

Who doesn't like being linked to a Queen who gets to ride around in fancy carriages, lives in a castle, and traces her family tree back to generations of people who helped make the modern world what it is today. Whether you bemoan the pomp and pageantry in an age where there are so many ills, it's hard to deny a royal visit or smile does a lot to cheer up the doldrums of everyday life for the loyal subjects. We'll never be able to attain the richness of the Windsor family, which is not to be measured by counting gold coins, and it is important to be able to turn our gaze towards someone who embodies so much of what makes England great. Margaret Thatcher might rule the government, but Queen Elizabeth rules the minds and hearts of more than just mere politicians.

Do I feel like a loyal British subject? Well not really because I'm a bit too nationalistic for that. But to me, the Queen does not represent Britain as much as she represents a noble and great past full of tradition and fascinating villains and heroes. When I stand up to sing God Save Our Queen, I am sending a very personal message across the Atlantic Ocean, not one meant for the whole British empire. The Queen may not have my vote when it comes time to choose our political leaders, but she does have my vote to keep on waving her white-gloved hand towards Canada whenever she wants to. And I tell her that every time I sing one of the most well-known and liked songs there is.

All should vote on death penalty with his views on the purpose of capital punishment.

An open vote by M.P.s is not the proper way to settle an issue like capital punishment, where so many people have so many differing views.

It is unfair to the M.P.s because they lose the respect of some of their constituents no matter which way they vote. The proper forum for determining the will of the people is a public referendum.

I urge all those who feel, as I do, that capital punishment should be reinstated, to write to their M.P.s and make your views known. Let's not lose the vote this time because its bleeding hearts have the loudest voices and the fastest pens.

Caring for children

To the Editor:

Many people in Canada are concerned about the care of children when both parents are working outside the home. The Katie Cooke commission on day care has proposed that the government set up universal day care, so that all women would have access to free government-run day care institutions at all times. This would mean free day care for everyone - for lawyers and doctors as well as low-income women. The government is now considering this report and other submissions and will soon make a decision.

Child care for mothers who feel they must have a paycheck to make ends meet is a problem that must be faced, but is universal day care the answer? We think not.

As a group who believe in equal rights for women, but not at the expense of other human rights, we feel that the government should consider the needs of children as well as the needs of women, whether working in the home or in paid employment.

Love is a child's birthright. Modern psychology as well as traditional wisdom emphasizes the importance to the small child of the parents - especially the mother. The bonding that takes place between the child and the mother and father is of great importance for its emotional security and mental health. The child needs a great deal of tender, loving care to be healthy and happy. Some children have even died from lack of cuddling. Day care institutions can never equal good home care in this respect, even though they may sometimes be necessary, if the family is in distress. In case families need day care, we should see that it is provided by people who really love children and will look after them well.

However universal day care is neither necessary nor desirable, and would impose an enormous tax burden on everyone. This, like other taxes, would squeeze the middle income family. It is estimated that this program would cost at least $11 billion dollars per year - our whole national deficit in three years.

If such a heavy tax load were added to the burden that we already carry, most families would need two incomes just to put bread on the table, and most mothers would be therefore forced into the job market, as has happened in Sweden.

Our organization has made some proposals to the government to help families who are in need of help with caring for their children. These are as follows:

Families should get the benefit of any money spent on day care. Only needy families should be subsidized - these should receive the money directly, so that they could then choose the type of day care most suitable, whether in the home or elsewhere.

Higher child tax credits, and higher credits for spouses caring for children at home.

Joint income tax if the family chooses, which would mean a lower rate for the one-income family. At present husbands and wives who are both working can take advantage of this type of saving, while one-income families cannot.

Tax deductions for child care in the home as well as outside the home.

We hope that your readers will tell governments that they do not want to pay a huge tax increase for a universal day care program which would make everyone pay for child care for affluent double income families, and by forcing mothers to work to pay these taxes, would deprive children of their right to be cared for by their own mothers.

Yours sincerely,

Lynn Schime, President,
Real Women of Canada,
Toronto, Ontario.

Summer guide to be ready soon

CHAMBER NEWS

by Shawn Hagerman

This has been a particularly busy and productive week for our Chamber Manager, Shirley Rapson and our various committees. John Mateer and Joyce Waffle met and approved the proofs for the upcoming summer guide. They have been assured by Allan Hall of Alcom Marketing that they will be ready for the Sportsman Show.

The Publication Committee of COTA, also met last week, John Mateer and Shirley Rapson attended. COTA will be tendering the 1988 summer guide once COTA has established the direction that it wishes to proceed, and then the Chamber should be able to come to a decision as to what we should do.

There has been a good response to the Sportsman Show, and it appears as if booths will be manned fully by volunteer members. Shirley Rapson is also contacting various tourist businesses with regard to a travel trade convention in Buffalo, Syracuse, and Rochester, on March 24, 25 and 26. This is arranged through COTA and was a great success for many of those businesses that supported our participation last year. If enough support materializes then our Chamber will go. We need eight businesses.

The Special Events Committee of Marg Kennedy and Brian Watts, will be assisting in putting up and taking down the booths.

Last Monday I met with Ken Langdon the Finance Chairman, John Mateer, Marg Kennedy, Shirley Rapson, and Carol Puffer, to discuss the upcoming preliminary Chamber budget for our next Board meeting. The final draft will be approved later in April.

One final note, Shirley Rapson visited the Cardiff Township Council last Thursday, as a special guest. This is part of an on going effort to keep in touch with all Township Councils and keep them fully informed of the activities and work of our Chamber.

Redmen lose first game in series

The Haliburton high school Redmen hockey club are now engaged in a best two out of three series in the Kawartha finals.

Fenelon Falls took the first game 5-2 on their home ice Monday night. The second game in the series will be played at the Dysart arena this Wednesday night, March 11. Game time is 7:15 p.m. If a third game is necessary it will be played at Fenelon Falls on Thursday night at 7:30 p.m.

The series marks the first time in the history of the Kawartha high school hockey league that two teams from outside Peterborough have made it to the finals.

The winner of the Fenelon Falls/Haliburton series will play in the all-Ontario final at North Bay in the week of March 25, 26 and 27.

Last week the Redmen beat out Campbellford in a total goal series. The teams had to go to a third game and finally defeated Adam Scott Collegiate in Peterborough last Friday by a score of 6-2. It was a best two out of three series.

Lindsay Oldtimers win

A team from Lindsay bettered 17 other clubs to win the top prize in an oldtimers hockey tournament held in Haliburton and Minden over the weekend. The Lindsay Outlaws needed an overtime period to defeat the George Wilson club 3-2 and take home the A division trophy.

The consolation side of the A division was won by Sacborough, who edged out Bradford 3-2 in the finals held Sunday afternoon at the Dysart arena.

In the 'B' division Bancroft IGA won the overall title with a 5-4 overtime defeat of the Barrie No names.

The consolation trophy in the 'B' division was won by Dales of Peterborough who outscored the Fenelon Falls Old Flyers 5-2.

The 'C' division the Georgian Bay Indians had an easy time of it, outscoring the Little Britain Pioneers 5-1.

In the consolation round, Haliburton's oldtimers skated to a 7-3 win over St. Catharines.

The 'D' division was won by an area team, the Norland Northern Lights. They shut out the Bobcaygeon Buzzards 5-0. The consolation game saw St. Benedicts double the Kawartha Oldboys 4-2.

There was also an overall consolation match and in it, North Hastings outscored the Lindsay Pastimers 4-2.

The oldtimers will be back in action in Haliburton County on April 3, 4 and 5, when some 32 teams from across southern and central Ontario will be on hand for a tournament that will keep the arenas in Haliburton and Minden busy right through Sunday.

Midgets await finals

Haliburton's OMHA Midgets are marking time this week as they await the start of the all-Ontario semi finals in their division. The local boys gained a spot in the semis after eliminating Fenelon Falls and then Elmvalle in earlier playoff action.

The Midgets, who have not seen action since getting past Elmvalle on March 1, are awaiting the results of a series between Barrie and Brighton, which will be decided by Thursday. Presently the two teams are tied with two wins apiece in the best of five series.

A schedule of the upcoming semi final round is expected to be announced later this week.

Lumbermen lead men's league

Emmerson Lumber leads the best of five Haliburton men's league series two game to one, and could wrap things up with another win this Wednesday night against Bishop and Wilson.

The series began last Wednesday and on that night, Emmerson Lumber looked very strong, skating to an 11-3 win over the surveyors. Bishop and Wilson battled back on Sunday night however, and after taking a 5-1 lead in the second period, hung on for a 5-4 win to tie the series.

On Monday night the teams were tied at seven apiece at the end of three periods, forcing an overtime period in which Emmerson Lumber gained the win.

The surveyors will be out to keep the series alive this Wednesday night, while the Emmerson club will be anxious to take the trophy and hang up their blades until next winter.

Dogs running deer is an annual spring problem

The Ministry of Natural Resources is asking dog owners to maintain control of their pets, particularly at this time of the year.

Conditions at the later stages of the winter usually result in a crust being formed on the snow which restricts deer movements but supports and allows dogs to travel at will.

Domestic dogs, which often travel in groups, take this opportunity to roam and participate in the thrill of a deer chase which often results in the death of the deer through injury or exhaustion.

Deer are in their best physical condition before they enter winter as a result of unlimited food supplies. During the winter months the food resource is reduced, resulting in a gradual decline in the animal's condition.

At this time of the winter the deer is the most vulnerable to harassment. As well as receiving leg injuries from crusting snow conditions, a prolonged chase results in high energy consumption for deer already under the stress of winter. This can result in the death of the deer even without being attacked. The females are extremely sensitive to unnecessary exertion and the added stress of pursuit can lead to aborted fawns.

During this critical period for deer the Ministry of Natural Resources asks the co-operation of all dog owners in protecting the deer herds by not allowing their pets to roam unattended. The Game and Fish Act allows a Conservation Officer to destroy any dog found running deer and provides a penalty to a maximum of $5000 for the owner of a dog found running at large during the closed season for deer or chasing deer.

The public can also assist by reporting any dogs observed chasing deer by contacting the Minden District Office of the Ministry of Natural Resources at 705-286-1521.

BUSINESS NEWS

More equipment and space have meant County Commercial Printers needs more staff. Standing by some of the new press machines are owner Terry Blair, trainee Les Isles, typesetter Marg Smith and Blair's wife Sherry, who runs the front reception area and office supplies section.

County Commercial Printers

New equipments and facilities foster growth

by MARTHA PERKINS

Staff Reporter

Instead of watching people drive out of the area to get their printing done, Terry and Sherry Blair decided it was time to offer people all the printing services they would need right here in the county. With their new machinery and larger facilities they now believe that if a local company has a job which needs doing, they'll be able to have it done at County Commercial Printers.

"Any business can't just sit idle," says Blair of his reason to expand. "You've got to keep on growing and improving on your business."

Their way of improving has been to add 800 square feet of space and new printing machines which will mean more work can be done and at a faster speed.

Perhaps the most important addition is the award-winning Swedish press which is able to do colour prints or cromalins. Local resorts which now have their brochures done in the city, will soon be able to have them produced locally in living colour.

When someone brings in a picture they want printed, Blair first has to send it to a larger company which is able to do colour separations—breaking the picture down into four negatives of yellow, magenta, cyan and black. In Haliburton, each negative will be etched onto a plate and by printing each plate separately, adding one colour on top of the other, Blair can print the photographs on paper.

mean he is able to get orders done faster and more efficiently. Trainee Les Isles has been hired to learn how to operate all the presses.

Once the printing is done, Blair now has a large paper cutter which can handle up to 500 sheets of bond paper at a time. Before he had to use a hand cutter, and this new machine allows him to do more work with greater ease.

"What we're trying to do is look after a customer at every stage of their printing needs," says Blair, and his new machinery will help him do this. He can now do everything from all business stationary right up to colour brochures. Posters, business cards, photocopies—practically anything anyone wants done, he'll now be able to do it.

As well as fulfilling a need in the county, Blair now finds he is getting outside business as well. When he quotes a price, it involves the selection of stock, typesetting, lay out, negatives and plates, press set up, press time, wash ups, cutting and binding (with labour built into each cost), and he can keep his prices competitive with larger plants in the city. His overhead costs are much lower and he says it costs as much to send an order from Haliburton to Toronto as it does to send one from the east end of Toronto to the west end.

Blair, who was born in Haliburton, got his start in the printing business in Toronto but along with his wife, had no intention of raising their family there. They moved up to Haliburton and in January of 1985, set up business in their garage before mov-

New apartments have no shortage of residents

and Dawson says the streak of sunny skies with no rain or snow in sight enabled the men to do the shingling in February.

As the building begins to take shape, the committee has to deal with any changes they might want to make as they see what it will look like. For instance, roofs were placed over the balconies to offer protection from the weather, something which wasn't planned on at first. The committee has also been busy deciding on the interior furnishings such as carpeting, paint and curtains, all which have to be durable and suitable to all tastes.

One problem they haven't had to deal with is filling it with residents. Applications are split into four categories, depending on people's financial situation, from deep core need to seniors who are self-sufficient. Each category has a waiting list, and one can foresee an apartment will never be empty for long.

"We've been working on this for three years and we've persisted and carried on simply because we felt there was a need," says Dawson, and the fact there's waiting lists proves this need was an acute one.

In those three years, there have been many hurdles to cover as the committee dealt with all levels of government, planners and architects. Sometimes those problems may have seemed insurmountable and the apartment would never get built, but thank fully, those days are now behind everyone and the fruits of everyone's labour can be seen.

"After all these years of work, it's a pleasure now to see it all shape up," says Dawson. "It makes the three years all worth while."

Congregation soon to return

On March 29, Rizzpah Elstone, who is 100 years old, and Madeline Austin will stand beside Bishop Terry Finlay as he cuts the ribbon to mark the first service to be held in the new wing of St. George's Anglican Church. As the two oldest parishioners, Mrs. Elstone and Mrs. Austin will help mark a new phase of the church which has been a Haliburton place of worship since the early 1920's (the original wooden church was destroyed by fire.) After the service, the Bishop will be laying the cornerstone.

This Sunday, churchgoers will be able to return to the church for Sunday services, after spending the past months working at the United Church at an earlier hour. They'll have to meet in the basement for the first two services, but for many, being back in their own church will be what's important.

When the parishioners enter the church after their absence, one of the first things they'll notice is the larger sanctuary. However, to help preserve the character of the old church, the old cedar roof was removed and then replaced in the new addition. They'll also be the same stain glass windows in memory of the Dover family, which now will be backlit.

Next, when they take their seats in the main body of the church, they'll notice they have a lot more room. The old church was designed for 90 people and before the renovations, there was an average of 135 people attending services. The addition now sits 210 people comfortably so it will be beneficial for future years when the congregation grows.

Another welcome change is the wheelchair ramps

'If you give a good service, a reasonable price and a good product, customers are going to keep coming back.'

There are not many other printing shops in the area—none in the county—which are now able to do this and Blair believes this is an important addition to his business. The work is very hard in that you have to be very precise and exacting when preparing the plates, but the finished product is well worth the effort. With this machine, he is opening up a whole new branch of his operations and is optimistic local businesses will take advantage of it.

Because he wants to be absolutely sure of what he is doing, Blair expects it will take him a month of practising with the machine before he can start taking orders. When the first brochure comes off the press, he wants it to look as professional as his hundredth job will be and allows no room for errors. It is his commitment to his customers, he says, which makes him want to ensure the best possible product.

Another addition which will help Blair provide a better service is an off-set press which can print anything from business cards to 11" by 17" posters. He already has one, and now the second press will ing to their present location on the corner of the Robertson road and Highway 121. Last June, they bought a typesetting machine and hired Marg Smith to work on the machine and layout.

As business grew and more local businesses started to get their jobs done at County Commercial Printers, the need for more space grew as well. Work started this year on the addition, which includes their home on the second storey, and in the front office they now sell stationary supplies and can usually have orders arrive in three days.

"We're here to serve the customers and in order to get the work out you have to spend some money to do it," he says of his expansion. "You take a chance and hope you can bring the business in."

Haliburton itself is growing, and Blair believes the area will be able to support his business and justify his spending the money on new equipment. The locals have always been supportive and he doesn't expect this to change.

"If you give a good service, a reasonable price and a good product, I think customers are going to keep coming back to you," he says.

Trail expansion

To the Editor:

I would like to thank the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association, of which I have been a member for almost 10 years, for finally taking care of the trail from Haliburton to Gooderham. I rode it February 21 and it was great. (Now if you could just get that bit off the road). Also I rode through the Tornado section and you have done wonders. Too bad someone could not make use of the wood for lumber or firewood. I passed some riders from Michigan who seemed to be pleased with the trail system. Here's hoping they come back and bring their friends. Keep up the good work and here's to next year.

Dysart conducts study into beaver dam flooding

Dysart councillors think they have come up with a way to reduce the risk of disastrous flooding from beaver dams east of Haliburton village, and will spend about $1200 to have an engineering firm conduct water flow studies as a first step.

Totten Sims Hubicki Associates will be asked to study the water course known locally as Moss's pond and creek to see if a roadway can be built and a culvert installed just below the existing beaver dam behind Haliburton's Extendercare.

Reeve Murray Fearrey said the idea of building a road across the watercourse came from discussions he had with Brent Clarkson, one of several parents of Victoria Street

School students who last year approached council and the board of education asking them to tackle the risk of flash flooding along the creek which passes through the school yard. At least twice in the past few years, the beaver dam has let go and the resulting flood has damaged commercial and private property downstream, although no one has been injured.

Fearrey said the road and culvert proposal would not be expensive to carry out, and would have the desired effect of controlling water volume should the beaver dam let go suddenly. The road also would provide access for any future development on the north east side of Moss's pond.

The reeve said that if the road was built on a base of large boulders and smaller stone, and the right sized culvert is installed, it would hold back water and allow it to flow downstream at a controlled rate. The road would be both cheaper and much less complicated than a dam at the same location, because road construction does not require an environmental assessment process and extensive approvals from various government agencies.

"It's the cheapest solution, and it's a fair solution," Fearrey said. Council agreed to fund the preliminary engineering study, and may construct the road later this year if plans can be completed.

Rug hookers welcome curator

GUILD NOTES

by Shirley Hodgson

I'm sure that everyone was happy to be alive this past week end as we had such beautiful weather. It warmed our hearts as well as our bodies and gave us the wonderful promise of Spring. With the coming of Spring we are all looking forward to an exciting future for the Guild.

As members we must specially thank our President Joan Hoad and everyone that assisted her during the past few months. She certainly was a "Jack of all Trades", and certainly has managed to pull everything together beautifully. Thank you most sincerely Joan, you certainly deserve a happy holiday. Have fun, enjoy yourself.

An enjoyable evening was hosted at the Rails' End Gallery on Friday March 6 by the Guild Rug Hookers. The occasion was to welcome the new curator, Elene Freer, to the Gallery and to introduce her and JoAnne Coumbs, the new secretary, to our members.

Among the distinguished guests was the Warden of the County, Murray Fearrey. It was good to see many members of long standing who have done so much to support the Guild over the years, such as Dixie Augustijn, Nancy Hubbert, Marion Langdon, Diane Arpe, Leo Dobrzensky and many others.

All found the exhibition of Whetung native arts and crafts from the Whetung Gallery, a most absorbing show. Seventy-five students also enjoyed exploring these colourful items during the morning with Pat Whetung, the guest curator and Elene Freer. They especially liked handling the beautiful pelts and tanned leather on display and hearing some of the fascinating legends. Other students will have this opportunity as the weeks of the show go on.

The Rug Hooking Group, by coincidence, is working on similar themes this month. They have just finished a rewarding workshop with Sir Sandford Fleming College, with teacher, Jeanne Field. Working with spun fleece from Ted and Mimi Carson's sheep, they were creating beautiful items geared to traditional Inuit and native designs. The soft, natural shades of the wools are blended beautifully and we hope to see the finished items on display at the Gallery later on.

Tourism programs to continue

Tourism operators in Ontario will continue to benefit from the Tourism Redevelopment Incentive Program (TRIP) and Grading Assistance Loans, Ontario Minister of Tourism and Recreation, John Eakins has announced.

The programs have been extended into 1987 and 1988, but changes have been made to both programs, which are administered by the Ontario Development Corporation on behalf of the Ministry of Tourism and Recreation.

TRIP is a loan guarantee program for new construction, expansion and upgrading of tourism facilities throughout the province. The maximum loan is $1 million for new projects or $750,000 for a first-time loan for existing operations. The loan is guaranteed to 90 percent of the principal.

As a new condition of loan assistance under the TRIP program, applicants will have to provide a plan of reasonable access and facilities for disabled persons.

The grading program is a star-rating system for roofed accommodations, such as hotels, motels and resorts. Grading Assistance Loans encourage operators to upgrade their facilities and provide better accommodations for tourists.

Over 900 properties are now participating in the grading program. $1 million has been set aside for this program in 1987.

Everyone needed for next election

past months.

"Your party has never needed you like it needs you today," he said. While some people are taking a pessimistic view and saying it's tough to be a Tory today, Long asked everyone to think of what being a Conservative stood for.

"We believe in the kind of society where individual enterprise and hard work are valued," Long said. "We want our government to conduct our affairs by the values we live by, decent, fundamental values and principles our party has stood for."

The Progressive Conservative party must re-earn the confidence of Ontario voters "riding by riding, door by door but we need your help."

This year is the year no PC can stay on the sidelines, Long said, and each and everyone must tell people "we're ready, we're revitalizing."

When the results from the first ballot were announced, Barkey and Ward were given approximately 10 minutes to mingle with the crowd and gain new supporters. Of the 479 registered delegates, 469 had voted on the first ballot and 454 voted on the second.

All the nominees and Ward's family took to the stage when the winner was announced and the three made speeches of thanks and recognition.

"We have something pretty exciting that's happening here," said Wilson, with the next task being "to take our candidate from this platform to Queens Park."

Ward was obviously pleased with his win, lifting his arm in a sign of victory when the results were announced. Thanking his wife Joan and his children for their support and encouragement, both in the race for the delegates' votes and in the upcoming fight against Eakins, Ward said he was somewhat humble to be following in the footsteps of Leslie Frost.

Curlers enjoy weekend's mixed bonspiel at club

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by Winnie Schofield

We have enjoyed some of the most glorious weather during the last few weeks. Spring seems impatient to oust old man Winter and has coaxed back some crows and other little Spring birds. The snow is melting and in sheltered spots can be seen green spikes of early flowers pushing through the ground. Tapping for maple syrup and scanning the seed catalogues will soon replace ice fishing and skiing. However, March is still young and may yet have some surprises in store for us.

A mixed curling bonspiel provided some competitive games on March 6 and 7 at the Wilberforce Curling Club. Organized by Ron Barr of Gooderham the event was enjoyed by those who took part in this great winter sport. On Saturday a fine dinner was served to the contestants and awards were presented. Winner of the "A" event was Fred Berning with his rink of Brenda Berning, Dave Nicholson and Debbie Nicholson. Winner of the "B" event, sponsored by the Wilberforce Veneer, was the rink of Ron Barr with Jo-anne Olszewski, Ken Craig and Sharon Hunter. The "C" event, sponsored by Agnew's Store, went to the rink of Dave Blaket, Aileen Blaket, Lee Stamp and Linda Blaket. Tony Berning took the "D" prize with support from Mariann Berning, Mike Oram and Craig Pettet. Fred Berning received tribute for his excellent ice preparation.

A puppet show is coming to town on March 16. Your library is sponsoring this free entertainment. The show, brought to you by the Brick Brothers Circus, begins at 3 p.m. at the Lloyd Watson Centre. All children are invited to bring along their parents.

Students learn about native art

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

On the walls of the Rails' End Gallery, dozens of stories are being told, not in written form, but by the imaginative works of art by some of Canada's top native artists. And to help local students "read" the messages, the owner of the Whetung Gallery on the Curve Lake Indian Reserve came to Haliburton to discuss the part of her collection on show this month at the gallery.

"In native arts and crafts, divide in your mind native people into two distinct times," Pat Whetung told the students from J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School. "There was a time in native history from the beginning to when the explorers first set foot in Canada," she explained, and this period is called pre-contact, while anytime after the first exposure to the other cultures is called post contact.

In pre-contact times, natives would make use of the nature around them to artistically express their culture and history. There was no written language so they expressed themselves through images, passing their stories from one generation to the next. Some of their art was also used to decorate their homes.

One of the favourite things to use was birch bark, both the clean side nearest the trees and the white, dirty part which had been pelted by rain, traversed by spiders and suffered through anything nature decided to meet out.

The bark was harvested at the end of June, for at this time, gatherers could make a long cut down the tree for as far as they could reach, and the bark would come off in large pieces by itself. In layers, the bark was very sturdy and could be used to make canoes or they could tear away the layers to work into finer pieces such as purses and moose calls.

Nature also provided the natives with a dangerous but beautiful art tool—porcupine quills. When Whetung held up the box of quills in the "touch and feel" part of the exhibit, she warned the young students to be very careful if they wanted to pick one up. The children were horrified yet delighted at the same time with the story of the man who had a quill become imbedded in his hand, only to work its way over the years to his chest, where it finally was removed.

Once the barbed end is taken off, the quills can be flattened and shaped into beautiful boxes or other braided decorations.

If the students didn't want to risk the porcupine quills, they could feel the various furs and leathers Whetung had on display. Answering a question on how the quills are removed from the porcupine in the first place, Whetung then went on to explain the tanning process. While chemicals are used today to treat the pelts so they won't rot, the list of substances used in earlier days made many of the students wrinkle their noses.

Whetung then asked the students to look at the paintings along the walls and to observe the differences between two cards she held up.

One was painted by Norval Morrisseau, and the bird figures are painted with vibrant, rich colours which seem to explode on the paper. Black lines emphasize certain parts or contours and there is a purpose, or story behind each figure. Everything has a meaning and is meant to have a meaning, which is characteristic of Morrisseau's work.

While Morrisseau tells people what they are seeing in his work, Benjamin Chee Chee leaves a lot more to the individual's imagination and he allows them to see whatever they want to see.

His birds may only be represented by long flowing black lines, a small orange circle in the corner perhaps representing the sun with long black lines flowing from it as well.

On the tour through the rest of the gallery, Whetung points out other types of native art, such as the masks painted by West Coast natives. There's also beautiful sculptures, pottery and tamarack birds, all showing the ingenuity and talents of Canada's native artists.

Whetung's gallery of native arts and crafts is a showcase of some of the finest works available. There are Ojibwa crafts, an art gallery and tall totems guarding the entrance of the centre.

The Curve Lake reserve has been the home of the Mississauga tribe since the late 1600s and is situated on the peninsula between Buckhorn and Chemong Lakes north of Peterborough. It is the home of more than 800 people and has a senior citizens home, church, two convenience stores, the Whetung crafts and gallery and two marinas. Children go to the school on the reserve until Grade 3 when they begin being bussed to Lakefield.

"What has built up Curve Lake is the fact that we're right smack dab in the middle of tourist country," says Whetung, and if the children ever go to visit the reserve, she does not want them to think all reserves are as fortunate. "We're a very privileged reserve in many ways."

The show closes March 28, and the gallery is open Tuesday to Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Salon helps women look and feel better

by MARTHA PERKINS

Staff Reporter

In everyday life and for those special occasions, most women like to put their best face forward. Feeling good about yourself is an important part of staying happy in life and while women know some of the ways they can make themselves look the best they can, Laurie Salvatori has opened a new business to help them with their quest.

A recent graduate of the Marvel Beauty School in Toronto, Salvatori has returned to Haliburton to open The Skin Care Connection where she can apply all the skills she has learned to help women present themselves in the most attractive and knowledgeable way. Whether they want a deep cleaning facial, a lesson in how to apply their makeup or help with unwelcome cellulite, Salvatori will be able to help.

Hanging on her wall in her salon adjacent to Hair Emporium there are four certificates which testify Salvatori has been trained in hand and nail care, pedicures; esthetics; electrofigure therapy, cellulite, bust and back treatments; and kinesiology. Each diploma required at least 1500 hours of training and practice at what Salvatori calls a very strict school.

She had always been interested in makeup and hair styling so when she graduated from the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School, she applied to the Marvel Beauty School.

"It seemed to have the best reputation," says Salvatori, who became an esthetician last year. "It was a strict school and I thought I'd learn a lot."

Salvatori wasn't disappointed. Because the training was based on how many hours a student had spent learning about a skill, lateness was strictly penalized and students soon knew they had to be on time. The lady who ran the courses was Inez Kurbani, who has won two makeup competitions in Italy and England. She was a very good teacher and Salvatori benefited by her experience and ability.

The trick with makeup, she says is "to spend an hour putting in on so you don't look like you have it on." If makeup is applied too heavily, Salvatori says it looks like war paint, and people find themselves overwhelmed by the makeup, not the person underneath it all.

The purpose of makeup is to bring out your good features and minimize the bad, she adds. Wide eyes can be made to look narrower by knowing what shading to use and where to put it and round faces can be contoured to look not-so-round.

The important thing, Salvatori says, is you should not be able to tell where the makeup begins and ends.

'It just makes them feel good,' says Laurie Salvatori of the reason women come to The Skin Care Connection.

Another thought to keep in mind is makeup should be appropriate to the occasion.

At school, Salvatori was taught three kinds of makeup techniques—day, night and weddings. At work or home, not a lot of makeup is needed while women might want to dress up their face a little more when they go out at night. The opposite is true for weddings, where the bride wants to look as natural as possible, with light makeup and subtle tones. No one expects to see a bride wear bright red nail polish, and when pictures are bound to be taken, special care has to be taken to use the right type of makeup. For instance, Salvatori wouldn't put any frosted shades on the eyelids because it will be reflected by the flash.

When a woman comes in to the Skin Care Connection, Salvatori will explain everything she does to the woman so with a little bit of practice, she will be able to achieve the same effect.

Because a woman's personality also affects how she wants to look, Salvatori will adapt the application to suit the woman. In Toronto, there were many type of people coming into the school, from homemakers to punk rockers, and of course neither wanted the same type of makeup. By looking at the woman and asking her a few questions, Salvatori can ascertain what colours and techniques should be used.

"I'd rather under-do makeup rather than over do it," she says, since it is far easier to add darker shades over light and apply more makeup.

Just as she tells a woman what she is doing with the makeup and why, she will also teach people about the best way to take care of their nails. Whenever she does a manicure or pedicure, she takes the woman through all the steps, telling her how to file her nails and how to add the coats of polish.

Before she puts on the polish, however, Salvatori will massage the hands and feet. Not only does this help the woman relax, but it is also very good for the skin and joints. As part of her course in kinesiology, Salvatori learned about where the muscles and bones begin and end, and what the proper massage techniques are.

This knowledge also comes in handy when women come to Salvatori for help with flabby legs or cellulite. While there is no miracle cure for either condition, a "facial" on the legs can be very beneficial.

When it comes to doing facials, Salvatori has a wide range of products which can help women cleanse their skin and maintain it so the aging process will have as little effect as possible.

"The earlier you take care of your face, the better it will be for longer," she says.

In taking off makeup, women should always use downward strokes because it will take the dirt and makeup away from the pores in the skin. To clean the skin and remove the dead cells, Salvatori will use upward strokes to best ensure she is getting beyond the surface of the skin.

As part of the facial, she also may use a vaporizer which forces a light steam on the skin or another instrument which forces pure oxygen into the skin which helps to soften scar tissue and dry blemishes.

No matter how dry or oily your skin is, it needs moisturizers, Salvatori says, and she carries a line of skin care products which are best suited to your skin. They are all made in Italy, and along with the makeup, are all natural and hypo allergenic with no perfumes.

When it comes to buying cream and makeup, Salvatori believes it is worth spending a little extra money to ensure your skin will stay healthy. Her creams are all water soluble and will be absorbed by the skin, while lanolin based products will just stay on the surface. Everyone has collagen in their skin which connects tissues and as you get older, the tissues begin to break down. You can't add collagen, but there is a cream which can stimulate what collagen is already present.

Depending on your skin analysis, facials can be given three times a week or once every three weeks, though Salvatori suggests getting a facial every month, whether you have dry or oily skin.

Salvatori believes the services she has to offer will benefit many people in Haliburton. One woman finds getting a facial so relaxing she falls asleep while other women like the chance to be able to pamper themselves.

"It just makes them feel good," she says, adding she gets a lot of satisfaction in seeing someone leaving her salon in bright spirits and a relaxed mood. Coming to The Skin Care Connection should be an enjoyable experience and one which Salvatori hopes more women will learn to appreciate.

Local church expands

both leading up to the church and in the basement between the two sections. Disabled people will now have much better access into the church from the parking lot off Mountain Street.

Behind the choir seats is Rev. John Phillips' office and other church offices, while downstairs there is a meeting hall, storage room, good-sized kitchen, and washrooms. This all inter connects with the old Parish Hall where the Sunday School classes will be held.

"The whole thing is well designed and easy to move about in," says Rev. Phillips. "It's very convenient and doesn't take away from the character of the church. Some of the charms of the old building have been maintained."

Colborne seniors hear of county's success

HOME SUPPORT

by Donna Bailey

It was my pleasure last Friday evening to be the guest speaker at Colborne Drop-in Centre's first senior's awareness dinner. Approximately 135 people attended including volunteers, seniors, guests, Melaine Sangster, Ministry of Community and Social Services Program Supervisor, government representatives and local service organizations. This organization already has in place: meals on wheels, transportation and a foot care program. Effective in March they are initiating a friendly visiting program and shortly thereafter, a swim program. Twenty volunteers service their seniors. They are a hardworking, dedicated group who will do well.

In my speech entitled "Seniors Helping Seniors" one of Haliburton County Home Support Services' logos - I encouraged the organization to continue with their efforts with the encouragement that in six years Haliburton now has 439 volunteers providing services to 1155 clients from its' modest beginnings. I stated that we must through our services and program development, prepare for the future as indicated from the latest statistical information. Presently 2.7 million Canadians are 65 years of age and older. This is three times more than just 55 years ago and represents a much faster rate of growth than for the total population. As Canada enters the 21st century, the population 65 and older will number nearly four million. In the second decade of the next century the Baby Boomers (those born between 1946 and 1966) will enter the ranks of the senior population. It will then escalate in size, reaching six million in 2021 and 7.5 million by 2031. Thus in the next 45 years the older population is expected to triple in size. This has major implications for all home support agency planning. We at Haliburton are already in the preparation stages for this.

If you need information or require any of our services please contact our office any weekday between 9 and 4 p.m.

Terry Johnson received a cheque for $375 from Haliburton Legion youth chairman Allin Cooper last Thursday evening. The money will fund a trip to the Terry Fox youth centre in Ottawa this week. For more details, see the Legion News at right.

Student earns sponsorship

by Gerald Irish

Encounters with Canada is a programme offered each year in Ottawa, for young people from all across Canada. This is a chance for them to get together, to learn about the various parts of our country and share their ideas and knowledge with one another. These special weeks are held at the Terry Fox Canadian Youth Centre in Ottawa.

A grade eleven student from the High School in Haliburton joined her classmates to hear a speaker talk about the programmes being offered this year. She started to dream about attending this special time for one week, the week that Youth in Canada would be celebrating Arts and Culture.

To make her dream come true, she would need financial assistance, as this trip and the week in Ottawa costs $375. Having heard that the Legion in Haliburton sometimes assists the youth of this area, she wrote to Branch 129 requesting financial assistance to the tune of $150.

The membership of the Legion decided that such an opportunity for young people should not be missed and voted to give to Terry Johnson the full amount of $375.

Terry was at the General Meeting on Thursday evening March 5 and was presented with her cheque by Youth Education Officer, Comrade Allin Cooper. Miss Johnson then spoke to the membership and thanked them for their generosity. Terry showed a great deal of poise and confidence and impressed all the people at the meeting. She will be a worthy representative of her high school and of the Legion. Terry has also promised to come to a future meeting at the Branch and tell us all of her trip and experiences in Ottawa.

Prior to the general meeting last Thursday, two representatives, Kim Wray and Gary Barker, from the Department of Veterans' Affairs, visited Branch 129 and attempted to explain the new programmes being introduced for Veterans in January 1988. About 65 veterans and their spouses attended this meeting. We hope that they gained some insights into the assistance available and would like to thank Comrades Lloyd Whittaker and Doug Pritchard for arranging this session.

Branch 129 welcomed two new associate members at the meeting - Gordon "Geordie" Vincent and Maureen O'Hara.

Branch 129 has been and will continue to be the sole sponsor of Kids' Day at the Haliburton County Fair in Minden. Once again, the membership voted $200, to be donated for this day.

The Legion in Beaverton suffered a great loss in a fire which destroyed their club room and kitchen. To assist them with their rebuilding programme your branch has donated $1000.

Other donations approved at the general meeting were: Skiarama - $50., Zone Youth Education - $50., Heart and Stroke Foundation - $50., Minden Minor Hockey - $200.

The Boys from Indiana and the Bluegrass Connection will be at your Legion on March 21 for a fun-filled evening of music and entertainment. We have only 300 tickets for the evening show. They are selling rapidly. If you want to attend this performance, get your tickets now. There is a possibility that if the event is sold out, we will be able to have a matinee show on that Saturday.

Canada On Parade, a spectacular show in Toronto, promises to be a once-in-a-lifetime experience. Branch 129 will charter a bus for the shows on either May 8 or May 10. Both days will feature Dame Vera Lynn. Check the information in your bulletin or on the board at the Legion and sign up soon. If we do not have enough people interested in seeing one of these shows, we will have to cancel the bus. Sign up before this coming Saturday.

The date for the annual Presidents' Ball has been set. Plan now to attend on June 6 and dance the evening away to the music of the very popular Frank Howard Orchestra.

President Joan has asked me to include this quote of her intentions to run again for the Presidency of Branch 129.

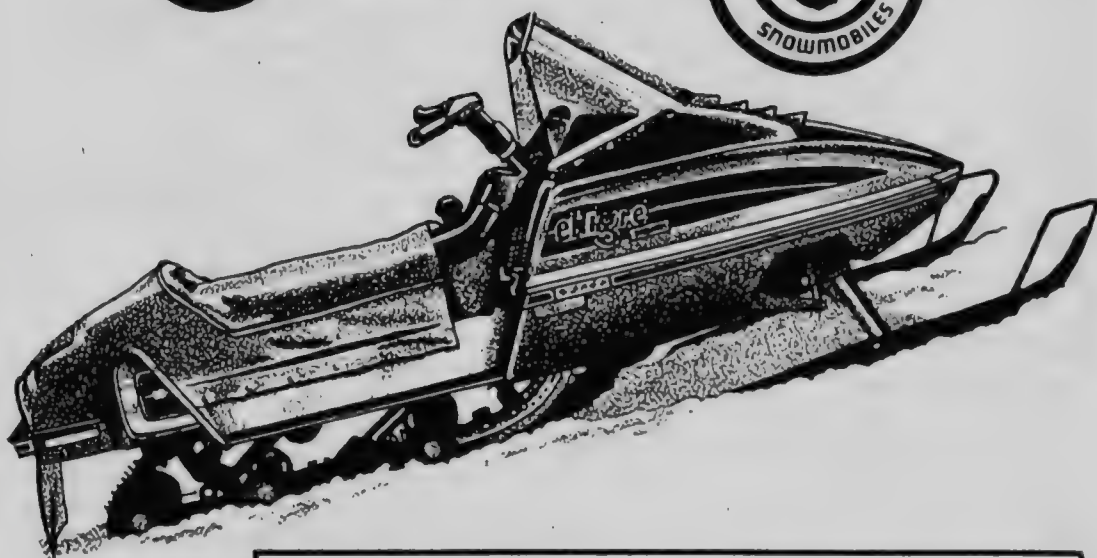

"So many new programmes have been initiated that I would like to see them firmly established and well on their way to successes. In order to do this, I plan to stand for re-election for one more year as President of Branch 129."

The next general meeting on April 2 is nominations' night. Plan now to be there.

Haliburton County Public Library has programmes scheduled that will be just the thing to meet your needs and to bring excitement into your lives when the weather may be getting you down.

First is the 'Puppet Mangers Presents the Brick Brothers Circus' for your enjoyment. Everyone likes puppets and when they are done well, they are a treat to behold. David and Ann Powell are a brother and sister team who are humorous, innovative and as "real pros" are always popular and something that shouldn't be missed.

Four performances only so pick the time and the place that is the most convenient to you and we will see you there:

March 16, Snowden Branch (Lochlin) 10:00 a.m.

March 17, Cardiff Branch (Highland Grove), 10:30 a.m.
March 17, Bicroft Branch (Cardiff), 3:00 p.m.

Then there is 'Mouse Tails' prepared, produced and presented by Waterwood Productions which is a company dedicated to the presentation of original theatre for young people. Through mime, music, puppets and "??", they present an exciting show that is so expansive that we can't hold it in our Branches but instead, need the bigger space of the community centres in the following communities:

March 21, Glamorgan Branch (Gooderham) Community Centre, 11:00 a.m.
March 21, Dysart Branch (Haliburton) Dysart Community Centre, 2:30 p.m.

Remember... you are welcome to attend at any Branch at a time that is convenient to you and if you like the show, go more than once.... There are no charges at any location!

People to thank for these events....Ministry of Citizenship and Culture who provide the money... OLS Trent who provide the help in booking and awareness....Haliburton County Public Library who co-ordinates at the County level....and your local Branch of the Haliburton County Public Library.

The schedule for the ROM Fossil display has been circulated within the County but more details have been released in the few days that may be of interest to you. Entitled 'Fossils: Myths, Legends and Folklore', the exhibit takes a light-hearted look at some of the popular beliefs that surround these natural objects with supernatural powers.

Deal helps people cash cheques

INFORMATION

By Doreen Hawman

Have you ever had the frustrating experience of being unable to cash your federal government cheque, for lack of a bank account at the financial institution at which you are attending?

The Ministry of Supply and Services and the Receiver General for Canada, have reached an agreement with Canada's financial institutions (banks, trust companies, credit unions, etc.) which now allows you to cash your Government of Canada cheques easily, without charge anywhere in Canada.

You will be asked to comply with a few requirements of identification. In lieu of a bank account or credit card, your cheque will be cashed if you provide suitable up to date documents bearing your photo and signature, such as a driver's licence or a passport. Also acceptable are two documents showing your signature, such as Old Age Security and Social Insurance card, or your driver's licence and a credit card.

For cheques greater than $750., you may be asked for additional identification or possibly have to have an account at that particular institution.

The Haliburton County Information Centre, located in the Municipal Building, Minden, is open every Tuesday from 9:00 a.m. until 4:00 p.m. or call 286-4100. Other week days call Haliburton 457-2733.

Norland News

by Kelly Graham

I hope a great week was had by all. Last Saturday March 7 a new Provincial Progressive Conservative candidate was chosen to battle it out with John Eakins in the next provincial election. The convention had not yet taken place before my column deadline but I'll bring you up to date next week. To date the three hopefuls are Valmay Barkey, Art Ward and Ann Wilson.

The local area Eastern Star organization is presently hoping to collect any old postcards you have about. You can donate these to Rotha Bryant in Norland. Rotha is also accepting pennies on behalf of the groups leader who is attempting to gain enough pennies to stretch a mile long.

Congratulations to Debbie Ann Weeks who won first place in the junior division at the public school public speaking competition at the Cobocok Legion. Debbie will now travel to Fenelon Falls to a higher level of competition.

Happy birthday to Jesse Buxey of Norland. A birthday party was recently held for Jesse, by his neighbours, at his home.

I'm happy to report that Bob Robertson, of Norland is recovering nicely from his recent heart attack.

Well that's all for this week. Have a great one and remember it is not only what we do but what we do not do, for which we are accountable.

Fish derby a great success

GOODERHAM NEWS

by Vera Riel

The fish derby which was held on Saturday at Koshlong Lake, was a huge success. Ninety-two fishermen registered and the weather co-operated making it a great day. The biggest fish was caught by Bill Reynolds of Haliburton, weighing in at 10 lbs. 10-1/2 oz., which earned him $100. Second prize went to Gary Mintz with a fish weighing 7 lb. 14 oz. - he received $50. Third prize went to Eldon Bull of Haliburton with his fish of 6 lb. 3 oz. and he received $25. The proceeds will be turned over for the new hospital wing by the Gooderham Businessmen.

It's good to see the Wilberforce Bantam Hockey team doing so well. They made the play offs and are now in the semi-finals. Most of the players are local boys from Gooderham.

The funeral of Mary Jeffrey of Tory Hill was held on Thursday at the Barr Funeral Home. The service was conducted by Mr. W. Borden from the Jehovah Witness Church in Haliburton with Spring interment to follow. After the service a lovely lunch was served by her neighbours and friends at the Funeral Home. Our sympathy to her daughters Jeffery and Rena, and son Jeffery of Tory Hill.

A shower was held in the Pentecostal Church basement on Thursday night for the newlyweds, Irene and Hilliard Stoughton.

Sorry to hear Mrs. Joan Trotter is in Haliburton Hospital with leg problems.

The weekly euchre game had a good crowd again with the door prizes going to Vera Riel and Jackie Steele of Tory Hill. The womens high points were won by Gwen Taylor while the mens high went to Art Holz. The most lone hands were a tie again between Honi and Robbyn Billings and the mens went to Buck Hillis.

Sympathy is extended to Darlen Riel whose grandmother died this week. She was a great bingo player and everyone will remember her best as Gramma Bacon. Miss Lynn Graham of Kitchener visited her father and relatives this week end.

Mrs. June Tousignant from Hamilton is visiting her sister Mrs. Dalyn Pickens until around Easter. Great to see her at the euchre again.

Visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Allan Gill this week end were Fay and Walter Madill of Brechin, Vivian and Hilden Johnston of Bobcaygeon and Doug and Darlene McElwain of Lindsay.

Raymond Riel of Lindsay had the misfortune to break his collarbone while snowmobiling at his parents' home on Friday.

Convention attended

Other donations given recently by Branch 129 are: The Haliburton Hyalites $100.; Clarence Rowbotham (who lost his home to fire) $100.; Snowarama $50.; and Windsor Indoor Classic Games $50.

On Sunday March 8, twenty-one members from Branch 129 attended the Zone F4 convention. This was election time and voting for Zone Commander and Deputy Zone Commander took place. Comrade Stan Moore from Lindsay is the new Zone Commander and Comrade Ken Bell from Omeme is now Deputy Zone Commander.

Branch 129's Colour Party was asked to be the official party for the Convention. Comrade Irv. Chambers and the members of his party did extremely well. All who attended were impressed with their military bearing and precision. Congratulations and thanks Irv. Grenville, Ken and Stan.

Many times, in my past articles, I have mentioned Zone F4. The other day someone asked me about the Legions in this zone. They are, Branch 67 Lindsay, Branch 129 Haliburton, Branch 135 Beaverford, Branch 141 Sunderland, Branch 184 Woodville, Branch 238 Fenelon Falls, Branch 239 Bobcaygeon, Branch 441 Kinmount, Branch 488 Brechin, Branch 497 Omeme, Branch 519 Cobocok. I hope this explains the makeup of Zone F4.

Public speakers do admirably

by Millie Moss

Get a group of friends together and join in the fun at St. James Parish Hall on Saturday March 14 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. That's when the Kinmount A.C.W. present their annual St. Patrick's Day luncheon and home baking sale. Admission of two dollars includes the lunch and pleasant company of many friends. The bake table usually gets cleared very quickly so be on time for this one.

Results of the euchre held at St. James Hall in Kinmount on Tuesday evening March 3 are: ladies high: Verlie Young and Verlie also held most lone hands, ladies low: Nora Crego, mens high: Arnold Schroeter, mens low: Charlie Molyneux.

A 50/50 draw was held at Kinmount Legion on Saturday February 28 with the lucky ticket being drawn by Kathy King. Congratulations to the happy winner, Linda Shepherson of Minden, who took home $123.

The annual public speaking and poster contest was held at John McGrath Branch #441, Royal Canadian Legion recently, sponsored by Kinmount Public School. Speakers and artists are to be commended for their imagination and effort. Prizes were awarded to all the participants. Ladies Auxiliary served refreshments and home baking to the delight of all. The Legion Hall was filled to capacity and the comments were positive. All who attended enjoyed the event in Kinmount. Winners of the public speaking were: Juniors: first: Cori Barkwell, second: Tai Gerard, third: Brian Dettman. Senior: first: Julie Austin, second: Jill Dettman, third: Zoie Rolfe.

Winners of the poster contest in the Juniors: first: Veronica Johnstone, second: John Henderson, third: Colleen Longhurst. Seniors: first: Jenny Bunville, second: Phebee Crego, third: Julie Austin. Legion Branch #441 wishes to express sincere appreciation to judges for their time and interest.

First place winner from the Junior and Senior level in public speaking now progress to the Zone contest on March 29 at the Legion in Fenelon Falls. Congratulations to all. You do Kinmount and your family proud!

Helen Graham, Jason, Bill and I attended the auction sale at Kirkfield Community Hall Saturday February 28 where we met many of our towns people. I got some coming up summer fun, in the form of a fishing rod and a box of lures and it even had a pair of pliers thrown in for good measure. Now all I need is someone to take me fishing!

Home from hospital are Earl Hartin, Ruby Schell, Bill Moss Jr., Vi Young and Bertha Stata. Stay well now folks, it won't be long till Spring.

We had to travel to Lindsay last Monday in that awful storm. It would have been a terrific day to stay home. The highway in some places was almost a whiteout with the snow blowing across the open fields and out onto the roads. We made it without incident though, but I was unable to attend the meeting of the Northern Schools issue which was held at the Kinmount Community Hall. If I hear anything further on the subject I'll certainly let you know.

Congratulations to Mrs. Lambert of Kirkfield who took home the $280. jackpot at the Kirkfield Lions bingo recently. Mrs. Lambert won on the 56th number and has been out to the games every Tuesday evening except for a stay in hospital when she'd suffered a heart attack. That's the way to come back Mrs. L!

Bill Lilley, who worked many a year with the Kinmount Legion bingo, is still a patient in Ross Memorial hospital and here's wishing him well. Bill suffered a stroke while preparing for the evening bingo games on Friday morning, February 27 and at this time is very ill.

To Ed Pyke, a very happy birthday on Tuesday March 3.

If you happen to be a top notch piano tuner and or a very good refinisher please call 488-2526. There happens to be an old, beautiful, huge grand piano that needs loving attention and your services are required as soon as possible.

Highway 503 between Kinmount and Norland has to be in the worst condition of any road in Ontario. I realize it's heaving because of thawing conditions but the parts of that road I refer to haven't been repaired in many a moon. We spend a fortune on preservation of old buildings so why not our very old roads?

Now for the public speaking held at Royal Canadian Legion Branch #519, Cobocok, March 4 at 7 p.m. Participating public schools were Cobocok, Burnt River, Norland, Kirkfield and St. Johns, R.C., Kirkfield. There were ten junior speakers and the winner was Debbie Weeks of Norland with second place to Laurie Geall of Kirkfield.

Public School.

Intermediate speakers winner: Michelle McDonald, Cobocok Public School and second: Shelly Foster of Cobocok. Each speaker received pins and the winners received cheques and plaques and go on to speak at Fenelon Falls Legion, 1 p.m. March 29, Ladies Auxiliary served hot chocolate and coffee.

Good luck to Scott Spencer who will be going into hospital on his March break from school. All your friends wish you well Scott.

You are invited to attend a luncheon at the Legion Hall in Kinmount at noon on April 24. This luncheon will be hosted by the Haliburton Home Support Services, Victoria County, a "welcome home snowbirds". It's hoped that two plaques will be presented at that time in memory of Ken Hyams who dedicated so much of his time and energy to many good causes in our area in the few years he was in our midst. One plaque is to be placed in the Haliburton Home Support Services building in Haliburton and the other possibly in the Kinmount Railway Station. These were two of Ken's pet projects and he was justly proud to be a big part of them.

A meeting and dinner at the Kinvale Restaurant on Thursday evening, March 5, attracted some 20 executive and guests of the Meals on Wheels program. It was at this time that Bob Holobon broached the possibility of plaques to honour the memory of Ken and the motion was passed unanimously.

Sincere sympathy to all the family and many friends of Grandma Bacon who died suddenly on Friday morning, March 6.

Happy anniversary to Marg and Glenn Viney on March 13.

Ephesians 4:29

One of my favourite television cooking shows is "Italian Cooking with Pasquale", seen on Sundays. I always think how Pasquale and I have a lot in common - we both like cooking Italian and we both like to sing while we are cooking! I have his cookbook and here are a few that I have found to be good.

LINGUINE CON VONGOLE IN BIANCO [Linguine with White Clam Sauce]

4 tbsp. butter
2 cloves garlic, minced
1/2 onion, chopped
10 oz. can baby clams, chopped
2 oz. white wine
2 oz. clam juice from can
2 tbsp. parsley, chopped
1 pound linguine, cooked and drained
4 oz. grated parmesan cheese

Melt the butter in a large frying pan and cook the garlic and onion for 5 minutes. Add the clams, wine and clam juice, and simmer for 10 minutes. Add the parsley and cooked pasta. Toss well. Place on a heated platter and top with grated cheese before serving. Serves 4-6.

ROTINI CON ZUCCHINI [Rotini with Zucchini]

(Rotini has a corkscrew shape which is excellent for catching the sauce.)

2 tbsp. oil
2 tbsp. butter
1 onion, sliced thinly
1 garlic clove, chopped
4 oz. prosciutto or ham, chopped
2 zucchini
1 cup chicken stock
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. peppercorns, crushed
1/2 tsp. sugar
1/2 tsp. basil
1/2 tsp. chili peppers
1 pound rotini, cooked and drained
4 tbsp. grated parmesan cheese

Heat oil and butter in frying pan, and cook onion and garlic for 5 minutes. Add ham and cook for 3 minutes more. Slice zucchini and cut into match sticks, then add to pan and cook for 5-7 minutes. Add stock and seasonings, and simmer for 10 minutes. Toss with cooked pasta, and sprinkle with cheese before serving. Serves 4-6.

SPAGHETTI ALL' AMATRICIANA [Spaghetti with Bacon and Tomatoes]

2 tbsp. olive oil
1 onion, sliced thinly
4 oz. lean bacon, diced
4 oz. white wine
2 tomatoes, peeled and chopped
1/2 tsp. salt
pinch of pepper
1 pound spaghetti, cooked and drained
2 oz. grated parmesan cheese

Heat the oil in a frying pan and cook the onions for 5 minutes. Add the bacon and cook for 3 minutes, then pour in the wine and continue to cook for a few minutes more. Add tomatoes and seasonings, and simmer for 15 minutes. Place cooked pasta on a heated platter and pour sauce on top. Sprinkle with cheese and serve immediately. Serves 4 to 6.

POLLO ALLA GIARDINERA [Fried Chicken with Herbs]

6-8 chicken pieces
1 tsp. basil
1 tsp. tarragon
pinch of rosemary
pinch of oregano
2 bay leaves, crumbled
1 tsp. garlic powder
pinch of pepper
4 oz. oil
1/2 tsp. salt
2 tbsp. parsley, chopped
1/2 head of lettuce, shredded
8 lemon wedges

Season the chicken with the first 7 ingredients. Heat the oil in a large pot and cook the chicken for 7-10 minutes, or until golden brown all over. Cover the pot, lower the heat, and cook for another 20-30 minutes. Season with salt and parsley and cook for 5 minutes more, then serve on a bed of lettuce with lemon wedges on the side. Serves 4-6.

PECK, William
In loving memory of a dear husband and father who passed away March 13, 1986.

If I had all the world to give I'd give it, yes and more
To hear your voice, see your smile
And greet you at the door.
But all I can do, dear Bill
Is go and tend your grave
And leave behind tokens of Love.
To the best husband God made,
I like to think when life is done,
Wherever Heaven may be,
You'll be standing at the door
Up there to welcome me.

Always remembered by your wife Gladys. 32-P-11

CRUIKSHANKS, Laverne

IN MEMORIAM

What wonderful memories he left behind.

Ever remembered by the family. 32-P-11

CRUIKSHANKS, Laverne

In loving memory of Laverne Cruikshanks, who passed away March 10, 1985.

Oh! I have slipped the surly bonds of earth, and danced the skies on laughter-silvered wings;
Sunward I've climbed and joined the tumbling mirth of sunsplit clouds - and done a hundred things
You have not dreamed of - wheeled and soared and swung - high in the sunlit silence.
Hov'ring there, I've chased the shouting winds along, and flung my eager craft through footless halls of air.
Up, up the long, delirious, burning blue, I've topped the windswep heights with easy grace.
Where never lark or even eagle flew.

And, while with silent, lifting mind I've trod the high untrespassed sanctity of space,
Put out my hand, and touched the face of God.

Always in our thoughts, Eileen and Family. 32-P-11
